Methods to deal with cheating
Recommendations of the Undergraduate Studies Committee

A. Enforcement

1. Change the exams from semester to semester – students keep copies.
2. Proctor the exam using both the instructor and the TA.
3. If possible, give different exams to different students in a classroom – separate them using different color paper. Often it is enough to give the same problems with different numbers.
4. Assign seats to students.
5. Warn students of repercussions at the Department, College and University level.
6. Unless it is a new textbook, or a new edition, the solutions to the homework problems in it are most probably readily available.

B. Professionalism

1. Describe the issue as that of ethics and professionalism.
2. Discuss the issue at first class and before every exam.
3. Ask the students to write and sign a sentence that they neither gave nor received help in completing the assignment.
