From Your Co-President...

The October 20 program by Jim Pignataro, from MSU Student Athlete Support Services, was very interesting. One of the things I could relate to was the structured day that they have set up for student athletes - from work-outs, classes, meals, tutoring, practice, homework, etc. Their day and evenings are scheduled to maximize both their academic and sports lives. However, when their sports and academic careers were over, or winding down after perhaps some time as a professional athlete, they struggled with 'reality'. MSU now has a post-sports program where former athletes can return to finish a degree, get career counseling, and learn how to set up some structure in their own lives. It has some similarities to those of us who had full time careers outside the home, with busy schedules and lots of commitments, and now are retired.

It can take some planning and time to ensure that your retirement is as satisfying as possible, with a mix of philanthropy, service, and activities that keep you physically and mentally stimulated.

Please consider joining one of the many MSU Community Club interest groups, starting a new one, attending the monthly programs, or serving on the board or a committee. Not only will your added involvement benefit the club and its scholarship mission, but can lead to new friendships and enjoyment for you.

Co-President Peggy Wade
